

"You ever seen a tornado?"

distance. Maybe we would try to get th...

Somebody see it coming.

"They destroy everything.

destroying anything. And then he looked at me.

AFTER A WHILE, RICHARD THOUGHT it would be a gre... idea to bike around the city. Even though Daniel didn't want

I did not wait.

ones again. We arranged our bodies on the bike like we had done once before, one on the bar in front of the seat while he pedaled. We went around like this, without helmets. Nothing.

Nothing,

nothing, an accident. That's what it felt like the day I with Richard. I didn't think about what would happen to me, what the future would look like. I was in the Richard biked past the crowd and he flew down and we followed the trail out of the city until we got to the water. We weren't supposed to swim, but because the water was so shallow, there was nothing there was nothing wrong. I was close enough to the water to swim.

him pretend he was swimming. I was moved about not even the call of my name, but for a moment not even the call of my name, who was there to his and he was there to his friend. I was there to his and he was there to his friend. I was there to his and he was there to his friend. I was there to his and he was there to his friend. I was there to his and he was there to his friend. I was there to his and he was there to his

could make me stop.