

Marlene Wurfel

Sunday

morning clears its throat trumpets a vee of wild geese grasses rush the stage
aspens offer golden coins
the stars
forgotten
a horse climbs a hill
delivers a sermon
does not mince words
one small spruce like a tooth pushes the sun
higher

«»